RIDING AT NEW ORLEANS.

One of the best students of "form" in the country, a horseman familiar with every detail of the sport, recently described the racing here as of the "rag time" variety.

He puts the blame for this state of affairs on the jockeys, claiming that there is not a single horseman in the entire bunch, and asserts that luck plays an important part in almost every race that is run, or, to quote him, "it is with all a wild scramble from start to finish, and every pole a winning mark. The thought of waiting tactics is tabooed. It is get away and get home."

A claim of this sort locks a little far-fetched and yet a study of the running of the races justifies it to an extent that is surprising. The fractional time of almost any race run will show that the last furlong, or last quarter, is slower by a couple of seconds than those of the middle or earlier portions of the journey. On the backstretch the watch shows a field speeding along at record-breaking pace. Furlongs under 12 seconds are by no means rare. Quarters in 23 $\frac{1}{2}$ , and three furlongs in 35 or 35 $\frac{1}{2}$  are every-day happenings. But when it comes to the homestretch there is a general backing up and the final drive is at little better than a two-minute clip.

Cases of swerving in the finishing strides bring complaints of careless handling. The real cause is "jaded" horses. They are thoroughly exhausted by what has been asked of them earlier in the struggle. When a horse wins easily it is because his competitors are all out a long way from home—a sort of survival of the fittest.

Owners and trainers have drifted into the same habits as the riders. Their orders are all in one strain—hurry all the way. Some may argue that the plan pays. It does, for the reason that all are working at the same game; but should some sensible rider turn up with head and ability enough to wait he would revolutionize things.

Just at present Dupre comes nearest to riding a sensible race, and although his score of victories does not equal that of Boland, Mitchell and that of one or two others, he has a way of getting into the money with bad horses; that tells what would be the case were his mounts selected, as are those who lead him.

Clawson is riding strong finishes just now, but his lack of patience has hurt his general showing.

Wedderstrand, who was east with "Curly" Brown, and who rode a horse by the name of Star of Bethlehem, has improved greatly, and in good hands—that is, with some trainer who would advise and instruct him—would come pretty close to becoming a great lightweight.

Boland, who rates as the "star" of the meeting, hardly deserves the classification. At times he is a master, and again his work is about what would be furnished by a stable boy. This inconsistency lessens his claims to distinction.

The "diamond in the rough" of the aggregation is a colored boy named Winkfield. He was sent here from Memphis to get some practice. He is getting it, and improving his opportunity. Give him an even break in the way of quality in his mounts, and none can take liberties with him; in fact, many clever judges class him as the equal of any boy riding here.

Slack, who came down with "Father Bill" Daly, seems to be going back, instead of improving. It was hoped that he would, like O'Connor and Odom last winter, earn a name for himself, and, incidentally, an attractive engagement, but he will have to cut loose from his present form to even obtain a percentage of the emergency mounts when he goes east. Vandusen, Tabor and McJoynt are capturing a fair share of the laurels, but there is nothing about their work one could enthuse over. They are hustlers, and that is all.

Mitchell is the joy and sorrow of the day. Like Boland, he is the master in one race and the novice in the next. Some of his work has caused a lot of talk and some official questioning. His friends claim that his errors are due entirely to poor judgment. If they are, he is far too uncertain a quantity to entitle him to the rating a few are inclined to give him.

Hamilton's position is that of a really clever rider trying to live down an old-time prejudice. On Saturday his finish on Molo was an effort of the highest order. With the proper opportunities, this jockey of the old school, if you will, would prove himself as clever as in the days that he rated with the top rank of his craft. He can still ride under 105 pounds, and eastern owners seeking a jockey might go further and fare worse.

Among the others seen every day there is a lot of promising material that, in good hands, would certainly develop.—New Orleans Picayune.

GOSSIP OF THE TURF.

It is to be hoped the stakes now offered by the Louisville, St. Louis and Latonia jockey clubs will receive entries, showing an increase over those of last year equivalent to the gain shown by the Coney Island and Brooklyn stakes. Western owners should be aroused by the magnificent entries awarded to the New York clubs and in a generous spirit of emulation must see to it that their own clubs are equally favored. The St. Louis stakes close Saturday next, while the Latonia and Louisville stakes close the following Monday. In all forty stakes are offered by these three clubs, twenty-five by St. Louis, seven by Latonia and eight by Louisville. This is a formidable list, and means the distribution of a vast sum of money among western owners next spring and summer, such important and valuable stakes as the St. Louis Derby, Latonia Derby, Latonia Oaks and the three richly endowed Turf Congress stakes being included in the offerings. But few days remain in which entries can be made, and DAILY RACING FORM urges western owners to avail themselves of the opportunities offered before it is too late. Entry blanks can be furnished at this office.

The negotiations that have been going on between the Westchester Racing Association and the Messrs. A. H. and D. H. Morris for a renewal of the lease of Morris Park, have practically been concluded. Under the agreement, official announcement of which will probably be made next Tuesday or Wednesday, the Westchester Racing Association secures control of the property for two years from December 1, 1900.

This will insure racing at Morris Park under the present regime for the seasons of 1901 and 1902 at least. It is probable that after that date the property will be cut up into building lots.

For the last three years there has been more or less talk of converting the property to building purposes. Since the time the course was laid out as the home of the New York Jockey Club, the culmination of the turf ambition of the late John A. Morris, the land has increased wonderfully in value.

This increase has been fully appreciated by the Morris heirs, and they have been desirous of taking advantage of it. It is understood that
